Despite the renewed approval of the two-thirds requirement. the size of the vote for the Albanian resolution was a severe blow to the United States, American diplomats had lobbied hard In other capitals to defeat it, notwithstanding the beginning of a change in the traditional C.S. opposition to Communist

Last year the assembly turned down the Albanian resolution, 56 to 48, with 21 abstentions. The resolution to treat the issue as substantive rather than procedural had carried in 1969 by 71-43, with four absten-

In 1955, the Albanian resolu-tion obtained a 47-47 tie, but the Chinese Cultural Revolution intervened to alter some votes in subsequent years.

While a number of changes had been expected this year as lomatic recognition of Peking by Canada and Italy, almost no one here had anticipated the number of abstentions by countries that previously had voted against the Albanian resolution. Even as recently as last night proponents of the Albanian resolution were confid-ing privately that It would lose by two votes. American spokesmer, were also confidently predicting the defeat of the Albanian move.

Many countries which voted against the resolution today made clear that their opposition was to the expulsion of Talwan and not to the seating of Peking, Countries changing from abstention to a "yes" vote were Austria, Canada, Chile, Equatorlal Guinea and Italy, There were no surprises here, but some of the African additions the number of countries which abstained this year after having voted against the Albanian resolution last year were not anticlpated.

Those countries changing to abstention this year were Rolivia, Botswana, Cameroon, Rolivla, Botswana Central African Republic, Jreland, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Peru and Senegal.

By contrast with the switches in favor of Poking, both Cambodia and Mauritius changed their previous "yes" votes to "no" this year.

Not all ramifications of the vote are clear, but plainly it will necessitate a rethinking of American strategy. This had been based on the assumption that the important procedural resolution would stave off the seating of Peking until there could be a U.S,-Red Chinese accommodation.

One Twin Born After Abortion

LONDON, Nov. 20 (UPI),-A letter to the British Medical Journal said today that a housewife gave birth to a bealthy baby four months after a hospital abortion because surgeons failed to realize that the woman was pregnant with twins and removed only one fetus.

Dr. Satva Vrat Sood, senior registrar of obstetrics and gyfiecology at West Middlesex Hospital said in his letter: "The incidence of twins is about one in 80, but it is not usual to investigate whether a woman undergoing an abortion is pregnant with one child or more than one

"The chances of a twin fetus being left behind are very remote," he wrote. "The chances against its surviving are even greater. Normally, the other fetus would abort itself," the doctor said

Sen. Fred Harris, D., Okla., who cast the only favorable vote in a committee test on the measure in early October, but voted against the measure today, said he would vote against the measure "unless its regressive elements can be removed."

Sen. Harris bas authored a $20 billion proposal that would guarantee $3,600 a year to every family. He had supported the administration bill as better than the present welfare system.

Spy's Identity Is Moscow Mystery

By Bernard Gwertzman

MOSCOW, Nov. 20 (NYT) .- A mystery grose today over the true identity and whereabouts of the Soviet spy known in the West as Gordon A. Lonsdale, who was reported to have fied of a heart attack last month.

The question raised was whether Lonsdale was the alias of the man the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation said he was: Col. Konon T. Molcdy, of the KGB. whose obituary was published here five weeks ago, or whether Lonsdale was the false name for a man mentioned for the first time today Georgy Lonov. And if Lonsdale is Lonov, is he still alive?

Until this morning's issue of Komsemolskaya Pravda, there seemed no confusion over identities. But today's result obviously meant the two-thirds-vote strategem has been undermined. Several countries, such as Canada, which have voted for the two-thirds requirement because of a genuine belief that the question is important, have made clear that they will switch their votes if the requirement is used to block the wish of a substantial majority.

Before the vote, Tunisia had Before the vote, Tunisia had suggested separate fallies on the seating of Peking and on the expulsion of Taiwan, but this was not accepted. Although extreme proponents of both sides object to such a course, it represents the private wish of many countries here.

Although the fund request has gone to Congress, the White House has asked a delay in its consideration pending a full-scale govern-ment review of U.S. strategic aims in the area, informed sources said. Officials insisted that the communications facility in the Chagos Archipelago that includes the isand of Diego Garria is viewed as an alternative to the U.S. military communications base in Ethiopia. But the White House is apparently concerned that such an installation coold be a first step to ward a significant and costly new American presence, in the form of an Indian Ocean fleet, with the implicit danger of Soviet-American India has already protested to Britain and the United States. Foreign Minister Swaran Singh, in a speech to the Indian Parliament yesterday, confirmed the protests and declared India wants the waters to remain free of big-power contests.

The State Department, when questioned, said a 1966 Anglo-American agreement on development of the territory for defense purposes was under "active review."

The Pentagon had no commen when asked how much money in had requested for the Indian Ocean project, but it seemed likely that the cast, including a ship anchor age and an airstrip, would run into tens of millions of dollars. No price tag for the existing Ethiopian communications station has been revealed, hut a measure of its size is that there are 3,200 American servicemen and dependents there. The Ethiopian hase is a primary relay station in the Pentagon communications network presumably transmitting message to Polaris submarines ga well as more ordinary signals. It also has an intelligence function, monitoring communications within the Soviet Union and elsewhere. The Pentagon's plans for the Indian Ocean area are unknown. There have been chronic reports that the U.S. Seventh Fleet will "seep around" from the Pacific to the Indian Ocean as the Vietnam war winds down. Secretary of De-lense Melvin R. Laird has limited himself to commenting that "as we turn over the so-called destroyer responsibility to the South Vietnamese—and that training program is ahead of schedule-we will free other forces which will be available and can be dedicated to other tasks."

The 1966 Anglo-American agreement bore no immediate fruit because the then-Labor government in Britain wanted no more responsibility in the region and because Washington was preoccupied with the costly war in Vietnam. This year, however, the new Tory government has altered the policy of withdrawal from Asia.

The Soviet buildup in the area began after the 1967 Israeli-Arah

How to Stop the Trade Bill

After two days of debate between protectionists and liberal traders, the House of Representatives has passed the traderestriction bill. The margin of victory was much narrower than seemed possible eveu two weeks ago. What it demonstrates is that at a minimum, there would be enough opposition to this bill in the House-and almost certainly in the Senate, where it now goesto sustain a presidential veto.

Mr. Nixon has thus far refused to commit himself to vetoing the Mills bill if it reaches him in its present form-or comes to him loaded with even more protectionist baubles when the Senate gets through with it. Unless the President does so, the United States may be precipitated into a trade war that will inflict serious wounds both on itself and on many of its closest trading partners and political allies.

The protectionist forces are strong only hecause they have clung together. During the debate this week on whether to allow amendments to the bill, one protectionist congressman was heard to plead with his fellow supporters of the Mills bill not to open it up to change-because neither the textile bloc, the shoe bloc, the oil bloc, nor any other had enough support to win on its own, If particular planks were challenged. New Englanders for Instance, were forced to decide whether they loved textile and shoe quotas more than they hated oil quotas and high fuel prices. Thus far, the progress of the bill has been a triumph of logrolling, but, even so, by relatively narrow margins.

The battle over the trade bill is not yet finished. There is a dedicated liberal trade force in the Senate that means to make a real fight of it. And there are many senators who would join them, if the President would only put aside his uncertain trumpet and employ the prestige and power of his office in the national interest.

Lunokhod-1's Meaning

That bathtub-like vehicle wandering around the moon just now may look like a Rube Goldberg device but there is nothing funny about it. The Russians have demonstrated that they can get it into the surface of the moon and send it off on exploratory trips into regions too treacherous for men to enter in the near future. There is no reason to doubt that it and its successors will gather a great deal of information for Russian scientists (and, we hope, those in the rest of the world) about the moon and, as time goes on, about Mars and other planets. Exploring by remote control has its disadvantages but it also has its advantages, most notably in the reduction of costs per flight and the elimination of the risk of human life.

The appearance of this vehicle, as well as the landing on the moon and return to earth of Luna-16, makes it clear that the Russians hope to regain some of the prestige they lost in the race to land men on the moon by an expanded program of unmanned space flights. It would not be surprising if they bring to earth the first Mars rocks or if they land the first moving vehicle on that planet. It is far easier, technologically, to put down and bring back a Luna-16 or a Lunokhod-1 than it is to land an Apollo loaded with

In terms of the American space program. this new success of the Russians should have little impact other than to persuade the administration and Congress not to cut back its funds any further. There is no logical reason for NASA to go like gang-busters in an effort to match the Russians in unmanned space exploration since the decision has already been made to proceed with a scaled down and more rational space program.

The first big trophy in space activities went to the Russians, the most recent big one to the Americans, and it is reasonable to suspect that future ones will be divided between the two nations.

The laser experiments on this particular Russian flight, however, do provide a reason to hope that more international cooperation in space exploration may be coming. The experimental package was built by the French and it, along with some of the American equipment on the moon, can be used jointly by astronomers of all nations in exploring such matters as continental drift. Each step, no matter how, tiny, toward such international cooperation is useful if for no reason other then to avoid the costly duplication of experiments. The basic barrier to international cooperation is the tight-lipped attitude of the Russians toward telling anyone what they are doing and what they have found. And that barrier is not made any easier to breach by such claims as the one advanced by Pravda this week: "One can only look back with pride at the pioneer Russians' inventions in the field of proper Russians inventoring by Kuylibin, view of the nations during transportation: The automobile by Kuylibin, view of the nations during transportation. the locomotive by the Cherapanov brothers. on had in mind when he introducthe airolane by Mozhaisky and the spaceship by Tsiolkovsky." That sort of thing defining where the nation stood at Truman 84. Dwight Eisenhower as any. A lot of hard work has Jefferson, who in his first inauguonly gives credence to the idea that Rube Goldberg really designed that bathtub.

International Opinion

Britain and a Political EEC

The political unification of Europe has always been considered one of the essential aims of the Common Market but there is no subject which has caused more controversy among its members. If, until recently, almost no progress has been made in this field the blame cannot be put entirely on General de Gaulle.

A real political union can only he built on an economically integrated unit such as the Common Market and is inconceivable hetween states with divergent economic policies.

The British opponents of British entry into the Common Market would therefore be well advised to pay more attention than they have done to the political price which Britain would have to pay if it did not become a member.

Oktober Was Soberer

Munich's Oktoberfest this year involved 21 drunken hrawls, 64 accidents on fairground rides and four deaths. One hundred thousand beer mugs joined souvenir collections. Organizers estimate that the number of visitors was around six million. However, the amount of malt, hops and barley consumed was comparatively low and turnover was down appreciably. "Only" 108 men and 42 women learned what the inside of the sobering-up cells looked like!

On the Moon, in the Mud

Guided from the earth, an incredible tractor that one would believe escaped from an animated cartoon is currently scraping the lunar soil, Meanwhile, men bewildered by the catastrophe, struggling in a world of mud, are trying to find out in the midst of a tide of bodies whether any breath of life tics, about who won and lost in the can be prolonged in the islands of East

Once again the desperate eagerness of men to conquer space and their prodigious successes in that endeavor make more cruel and more culpable their helplessness to nourish the hungry and to rapidly rescue the victims of such natural catastrophes.

-From Le Monde (Paris).

Supping With the Devil

The high-level South African delegation which is now in the Malagasy Republic is not just there for the beer. This huge island some 250 miles off the South African coast. is the best hope after Malawi for Mr. Vorster's "ontward-looking" foreign policy.

For those countries on South Africa's immediate periphery who are opposed to apartheid the ontward-looking policy creates a cruel dilemma. They know well enough that they cannot overnight stop their trade with the republic. All they can do is attempt to phase it out as soon as they can.

It may he realistic for countries to recognize that sometimes they have to sup with the devil. But it is not realistic to shorten the spoon.

Wight In, London Out?

If Britain was blackballed from the UN so that the Isle of Wight could be in, London would feel righteously provoked. So what does Peking feel? For years she has been treated as an outcast. The prejudice has been totally unreasonable and totally dotty.

Nixon's World and the Congress

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—Behind the scenes in Washington these days. Dr. Henry Kissinger and others are preparing the Nixon administration's second annual report on the State of the World. This is a useful and ambitious project, introduced by President Nixon last year, and it could, if it is carefully prepared and presented, add order and perspective to the national debate.

The need for a wider and longer view of the nation's dilemmas is a precise definition of the nation's July 30. problems or an invitation to fair and searching discussion.

It is this fair and searching debate that is missing in the fed-eral capital today. The argument bere now is still about the personalities and tactics of partisan poli-November vote, about the future of Spiro Agnew, Ed Muskie, Hubert imphrey, George McGovern and Edward Kennedy, and who the President had to the White House breakfast, and who is going to leave or join the cabinet and the White House staff, and how the new Adlai Stevenson compares with the old Adlai Stevenson, and the young Senator Taft with the old Senator Taft, and how they compare with one another.

The Real Issues

It is good copy, particularly for the society pages, but for the time being, it is really secondary stuff. We will find out later, much later, whether Ed Muskie is presidential material and whether Humphrey, Kennedy and Agnew are coming up or going down, bot for now ell this is less important than the realities of population, arms control, inflation, race and the alarming struggle for strategic advantage in the Middle East.

The President's year-end review of the world situation could help bring all this into focus. His Vietnam policy, his disarmament policy. his Middle East policy, his NATO policy, his Latin America policy all influence his budget, now in serious deficit, and contribute to the mood of uncertainty now prevailing in Washington.

While this capital has been pre-occupied with the domestic political struggle, U.S.-Soviet relations have drifted into serious misunderstandings over the Middle East and Cuba. The Nixon policy of cutting overseas commitments meanwhile has aroused new anxieties about the possibility of major U.S. troop withdrawals from Europe, and the economic recession in the United States has raised again the threat of new trade and monetary problems in the world.

At the present time, there is no coherent discussion of these seemingly intractable problems, no clear definition of what is primary and what is secondary. Accordingly, the discussion is fragmentary mercial issues and partisan strategic interests getting in the way of the larger question of the nation's well-being.

This is what is really troubling Washington these days in the Con-gress, the civil service, the press and even within the administration itself: Not that the administration has no clear answers to all these devilish problems—nobody expects that-but that there is no orderly procedure for discussing them.

Questionable Stand In fact, both in the Congress and in the press, there is a growing feeling that the administration is trying to evade questioning by avolding testimony on Capitol Hill and cutting down on news con-

A Destiny in a Single Portrait

DARIS, Nov. 20. - "Rembrandt's Century" is the title of an extremely revealing and interesting exhibition which opened this week at the Petit Palais (Avenue Alexandre III. to Feb. la).

It includes some 250 paintings from museums all over France (with a strong dominance of Paris nonetheless), excellently presented in order to bring out the evolution of style from 1600

The show is revealing for several reasons. For one thing, by setting Rembrandt in the broad perspective of his century it sets off even more strikingly. if needs be, his extraordinary stature. while also showing to what extent he remained a part

It also makes one realize what a vast amount of bad painting was being done then, as in any century, though no doubt it was done with a great deal of dexterity.

The idea of the exhibition is to show the ground ont of which Rembrandt arose and the echoes tbat came after him and ultimately gled out.

The fact is of course that the affinities we can discover between Rembrandt and his predecessors are of a formal and technical order. The essential value of Rembrandt's art is something totally individual reaching far beyond the formal order of things that can be discussed in an entirely objec-

Imitators of Caravaggio flourished in the Lowlands (Honthorst, Terbrugghen) during the first half of the 17th century and presaged Rembrandt's own very personal use of light But with Rembrandt it is no longer a technical trick but something that corresponds to an inner necessity. Despite their obvious qualities the epigones of Caravaggio tend to be conventional, sometimes rather stiff (like Terbrugghen) and occasionally vulgar (like Bonthorsti though not necessarily to an objectionable degree.

It is perhaps in this last genre that the worst taste of the age is crudely manifest. The Italian influence is strongly apparent in composition, anatomy and melodraniatic posturing. What is lacking however is the Italian zest that makes even the melodrama go down. Everdingen's "Socrates, His Two Wives and Alcibiades" (No. 75) is a good example of what should not he

A doltish Socrates sits staring vacantly in the direction of Alcibiades while Xantippe daintily pours water on his pate as though she were watering her flowers. Both ladies are exhibiting one of their breasts though it is hard to determine whether it is out of provocation or insttention. The inner flaccidity of the characters in this painting is a sufficient but perhaps unnecessary demonstration that good craft is not enough.

An interesting item in this room is Van de Venne's grisafile, "The Beggars' Dance" (No. 217), which has its own peculiar and fererish dynamics. The beggars in their dancing are like old rags tormented by the wind while the flutist in the foreground has something of a maleficent vagabond whistling

From there one passes into the two rooms devoted to Rembrandt. There are 21 of his paintings on display, starting with some of his earliest production (he did "Balaam's Ass" at the age of 20) and showing his gradual progress to maturity. Each person has his preference no doubt but to me the two finest paintings of the exhibition are the "Bathsheba," painted in 1654 when he was 48, and his self-portrait at the age of 54

Both paintings belong to the Louvre, both show how the artist achieved his greatest depth by an acceptance of reality without seeking any es-cape into the kind of idealization that makes so much art perfect no doubt, but inhuman, Here the perfection is of another order. The mastery itself is obvious, but it is eclipsed by the emotion both paintings con-

Looking Inward

She looks inward, to her past and to her future, yet she is strongly rooted in the presentand her inward reflectiveness does not make her forget the woman kneeling before her. Indeed one might suppose that she is also encompassing this older woman's destiny, viewing it with motherly compassion and comparing it to ber own in their basic similarity.

The multiplicity of emotions implicit in the painting helps to convey the temporal nature of the subject, and prevents it from being the snapshot of an immortalized instant. This, I believe, is what distinguishes the artist from the craftsman, no matter how able the latter may be: the deeply personal expression of a spiritual view upon the most essential aspects of all human destiny. And this, combined with an overwhelming psychological insight, is what makes Rembrandt such a solitary peak—a peak which nonetheless is not beyond the immediate reach of any straightforwardly serious mind and heart

The exhibition goes on to show Rembrandt's disciples and his later influence, and from there with a Vermee Ruysdaels and works by 40 other painters of variable celebrity, to the different schools that flourished until the end of the century. It makes a fascinating survey of a century in ferment.

London Theater -

Engrossing Evening By Pinter and Joyce

By John Walker

L ONDON, Nov. 20.—God bless . Harold Pinter. He is as fine a director as he is a writer, and proves it by rescuing James Joyce's "Exlies" from nearoblivion to provide a totally engrossing evening at the Mer-

Inevitably, Joyce emerges as a proto-Pinter, with the emphasis on talk rather than action. Very little happens in a conventionally theatrical way. The most dramatic moment comes when a lady's hand is kissed. But, in the talk, souls are laid bare.

It is rare to feel, behind the words, a director's intelligence which is as keen as the author's. But you can sense Mr. Pinter's presence in the precision of the pauses, the impeccable modula-tions of tone. It is like experiencing a great conductor in complete control of an orchestra. From the first words, I was gripped and, if my attention wandered a little during the second act, I was completely captured again by the third.

. Spiritual Exile

Joyce deals with spiritual exfle. There is Richard Rowan, a writer who has returned from Rome to Dublin with his common-law wife, Bertha, and their illegitimate child. Rowan, presumably a self-portrait, is a torsured man, preaching sexual freedom to justify his own affairs.

He is unfaithful to Bertha in another way, spending his time writing to and for Beatrice, a giri he knew nine years before There is Bertha, straightforward in her love, rejecting a freedom she does not want, and aware that she cannot provide Rowan with the intellectual stimulus that he needs. The situation is complicated by their oldest friend, Robert, who makes advances to Bertha. Rowan encourages her to respond, finding a dark thrill in the thought of her infidelity. Sometimes the complex sexual attitudes suggest Lawrence: Rowan speaks of the bond formed between him and Robert through their love of the same woman. There is much of Ibsen. too, although Joyce is less concerned with imposing a tidy and dramatic pattern on events, It is strange to hear the author of "Ulysses" using dialogue in which the language is erasive and full of hints, rarely saying what it means. Rowan questions his wife: "Did he kiss you? On the lips? Or . . . the verve with Pinter directs is matched by the performances of the actors. Vivienne Merchant, suppressing her own intelligence, is a moving Bertha. Timothy West, too, as the friend blundering out of his depth, gives a warm and perfectly judged portrayal while there is nothing on the London stage to equal the sardonic passion of John Wood in the role of Rowan, "Exiles" is a sometimes demanding, but immensely rewarding experience. At the Strand Theatre, J.B.

Priestley's broad comedy "Woen We Are Married" receives its first London revival since the original production 32 years ago. Mr.Priestley, present at the first night, seemed delighted both by the production and its enthusiastic reception. He was reportedly concerned over the casting of the key role of photographer Henry Ormonroyd, a part he has played himself, finally giving his imprimatur to Fred Emney.

It may seem churlish not to welcome Mr. Emney back to the West End theater. He is often hugely, in his usual guise of an innocent 280-pound baby, incongruously clad in a tweed suit. clutching a cigar and a monocle. He teeters round the stage like a rogue elephant on tiptoe. He inadvertently sits on a book and removes it with the ad-lib: "I never could stand heights." Another time, having invited the lady sitting by his side to accompany him across the stage to the piano, he struggles to rearrange his bulk into a forward position that will propel him out of his armehair, and finally subsides with the words: "We won't rush." When, at last, he does reach the piano, Mr. Emney stops the show.

But he is, as always, Fred Emney and not Mr. Priestley's blunt North Country photographer. He performs as a stand-up, or, more often, propped-up, comedian and seriously alters the balance of the play.

The first act drags badly, and much of the verbal humor has, inevitably, aged ("If my mother were alive today, she'd be turning in her grave"). But the central situation is still alive: three highly respectable, snobbish couples celebrating their 25th wedding anniversaries discover that they were never properly married. The cast extracts the maximum amount of fun from this, and the second and third acts are full of amusement, due in part to some excellent character action, especially from Hogh Lloyd as a henpecked husband who regains his courage. and from Peggy Mount, another heavyweight talent, as a shrcw who is tamed.

followed the fortunes of the various pieces.

Roy Lichtenstein's "Big Painting No. 6," a 1965 work in great waves of red, green and black washes, was the star of the sale, bringing $75,000. That equaled the previous record suction price paid for an American painting while its creator was still alive. The distinction is shared by William Harnett. The Lichtenstein piece went to Galerie Rudolf Swirner of Munich and The Hague.

Even better things were expected at the auction. Of six consigned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Scull, two were bought back by the New York collectors. They were the late Mark Rothko's "No. 16—1960" at $85,000 and "Two Flags" by Jasper Johns, a double image of the American flag, for

Other works with great expectations that were bought back were a quiet monochrome "Tennyson," a Jasper Johns at $70,000 and "Pink Disaster" by Andy Warhol at $19,000. Both are owned by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Factor of Beverly Hills, Calif., whose collection was on the block.

A Civiford Still com "Indian Red and Black 1946-H." went for $60,000, an auction record for that artist.

A realistic, three-dimensional construction of a stove with roasts, pots and vegetables by Claes Oldenburg, all in life size, also made an auction record for that artist. It went to Galerie Swirner for $45,000.

Jackson Pollock's "Painting No. 23 (Frogman)" was bought back-for $70,000 by its unnamed owner, one of about ten paintings that falled to attain minimums established by consignors.

ture began studying with Delaroche, who imparted to his pupils a taste for even more academic compositions of a moralizing turn. Thomas Couture's first major painting, in 1837, was titled "Noah, Just Coming Out of the Ark With His Family, Offering a Sacrifice to God After the Deluge." (It is now in storage at the Louvre.) Then came "The Romans of the Decadence," which made him famous overnight. From then on, he had countless orders from the French government. He might have become a millionaire, had he not been so short-tempered. For example, one day, Napoleon III was in Couture's studio, posing for a picture ordered by the government. It was to be called "The Christening of the Heir Apparent" and was to be a huge composition, showing a crowd watching the ceremony in Notre-Dame with the emperor's uncle, the late Napoleon I, floating overhead in a cloud. Growing restless, Napoleon III, who had been sitting in total silence for quite some time, finally ventured a mild remark to break the monotony. "Sire," growled the painter, "who is painting this picture, Your Majesty or me?" This sort of thing, coupled with endless wrangles with civil servants who were supposed to be overseeing state commissions, added nothing to Couture's personal popularity. Be that as it may, the work did progress, although the face of the emperor was left unfinished. The present whereabouts of this painting is unknown.

Among the works to be sold Monday is a rough preliminary sketch for this huge work, showing the emperor from his shoulders to his knees. It is powerfully drawn in bold crayon strokes outlining the body. No doubt, it is vastly superior to the now forgotten semi-finished work.

Indeed, the studies in the salo leave no doubt as to where Couture's true talent lay. As a draftsman he was superb. His theory was that one should draw quickly to train the eye. This is what he did when he joited down the country peddler, drawing a cart, with his wife and children. Or when he wanted to put down a passing impression of women simmed on their benches at mass, with the ghostly silhouette of the priest looming high in the right corner.

There is a Danmier quality to these two studies and to a few others, strangely contrasting with the 18th-century mood of some of Couture's other studies. There is a sketch of Pierrot and Harlequin in the sale that is strikingly suggestive of Watteau, Occasionally, Couture is good enough to remind us that he was the teacher of the great Edouard Manet himself. In some sketches, one senses the strong black outlines that were to characterize Manet's work.

Here is a sale for art lovers who like drawings and do not think that celebrity is a must when it comes to buying art. Contine may have a special appeal to Americans. A large number of his pupils came from the States.

Two exceptional sales of old master prints will take place in Landon next week. The first, at Christie's on Tuesday, includes some outstanding prints by Albrecht Dürer. Lot 29 is a first state impression of "St. Jerome in Penitence"-of which only one other example was known in the past. Some of the best Rem-brandts to come up at auction recently will also be included. They come as forerunners to the dazzling collection of 132 Rembrandt etchings formed by the 10th Viscount Downe (1907-1965). This collection will be sold Thursday at Sotheby's.

Around the Spanish Galleries

MADRID

Jose Caballero, Galeria Juana Mordo, Villanueva 7, Madrid, through November.

Caballera is obsessed by circles and texture. There are complete circles, parts of circles, roads leading to circles, tracks left or circles, the canvas is palette scratched and paint scooped into whirls with the surface deliberately worked over in parts. Browns, rusty reds and white predominate, white used to startling effect with yellow in one, the whole poetic, fascinating and extremely virile.

Zobel, Galeria Egam, Villanneva 29, Madrid, to Dec. 5.

Zobel is the painter who gave his wonderful collection of Spanish art to the Cuenca Minseum. Here his own work is influenced by the Orient, abstract shapes in brown-black oll on paper, so delicate they seem to take wing and fig.

Francisco Peinado, Treulo. Museo Arte Contemporareo. Pasea Recoletos 20, Madrid, through Nevember.

Surrealist, biological and organic, Peinado uses mixed tech-niques in his powerful paintings bulbous forms, since and eyes. His colorful red canvases show the influence of the 12 he spent in Brazil. Monsters grow from cells: gray becomes multi-colored with his brush. His spidery drawings have the same horrific impact as the canvases. Urculo is probably the best exponent of hard-edge painting in Spain. His psychedelic color shocks, as do the subjects of his paintingsnaked women in compremising positions with butterflies, cushions and animals. His exhibi-tion was arranged by Galeria

Fernando Saez, Galeria Kreis-ler, Sefrano 19, Madrid, through November.

One of the founders of "new figurative" art in Spain, Saer's paintings have a brute strength and force while retaining a certain lyrical quality, Browns and beiges combined with tex-tural variations show his deep understanding of paint, and his bolder use of color in the miniature canvases in masterly.

BARCELONA

Iturralde, Galeria Rene Metras, Concejo de Ciento 331, Barcelona, through November.

Iturralde paints geometric forms on pieces of wood which are themselves variations of different geometric shapes. Con-cerned with the problem of space and movement, he uses color to achieve an illusion of space. The effect is rather like a child's building components or an architect's futuristic model and owes nothing to Vasarely.

Colectiva, Galeria Aquitania, Avenica Sarria 31 & 33, Barcelona, to Dec. 2.

The Acuitania opens with many big names in the Spanish art world, and the result is that some completely outstrip the others. The winners are a new color-alive abstract by Arginon two small black, white, and brown paper collages by Guinovart, a textured abstract of other, brown and red rubbed over the white painted ground by Suarez and Millares's colleges of black, white and rusty red burlap cut, knotted, stretched, sewn, painted and bunched out to create different planes.

Arte Brasilena Contemporaneo 1970, Hospital 56, Barcelona, through November

abstract, and new figurative painting. The outstanding work is by two Japanese living in Brazil, abstract oils by Manabu Mabe and fine siik-screen prints by Tomle Ohtake. Rosina Becker Do Valles orimitives are charming and very Latin American in flavor. There arc 11 women among the 27 exhibitors.

Burns at White House Meeting

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 (Reuters).—President Nixon and Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur F. Burns met this morning to discuss the fiscal and monetary policy mix necessary to stimulate an orderly growth of the economy, White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler said.

Mr. Ziegler stressed the 45-minute meeting was purely a routine consultation and sidestepped questions on whether the President urged Mr. Burns to accelerate the growth in tha money supply. He repeated that both fiscal and monetary aspects of future growth were discussed.

Asked if the administration was considering some form of incomes policy, wage and price restraint or "jawboning,"
Mr. Ziegler said he would not use these terms in this context.
But he conceded the administration is interested in moves beyond orthodox fiscal and monetary policies.

Other conferees later in the day were Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and members of the productivity commission, a "watchdog" panel created several months ago to keep watch over disparities in wages

Bundesbank Still ${f Supporting \, Dollar}$

PRANKFURT, Nov. 20 (Reuters) -The West German central bank purchased an estimated $100 million in support operations on the foreign exchange market here today, market sources said.

The bank has been supporting the dollar continuously in recent weeks as funds have contimued to flow into West Germany, pushing the deutschemark to its 3.63-to-the-dollar ceiling.

The Bundesbank had taken in an estimated $200 million yesterday and a total of about $600 million over the past week, traders estimate.

Far East Reaction

HONG KONG, Nov. 20 (AP) .-Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said today that if the Mills bill becomes law it could lead eventually to the Common Merket "putting up tariff walls against the United States."

There would also be an immediate effect on industry in Japan, with Taiwan (Formosa), South Korea and Hong Kong suffering and then Australia being affected, he said.

There would he a "nuclear fission type reaction," he said. Mr. Lee criticized the bill as "a retrograde step" which could, if it hecame law, lead to protectionist measures in every industry in America facing international com-

Northrop Wins Fighter Contract For $1.4 Billion

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20 (Reuters).—The Defense Department announced tonight it has awarded a contract to Northrop Corp. for the development and production of 325 international fighter aircraft, valued at more than S1.4 billion.

The Pentagon said that General Electric will produce the aircraft's engine.

The initial funding obligatlon is 321 million, and the fighter will have a unit cost of about $1.5 million, excluding development costs.

The aircraft will be sold to or given to four Asian countries in the next five or six years. The program receives congressional approval of necessary funds. They will replace tha Northrop F-5 Freedom Fighter.

LTV Acrospace, McDonnell Douglas and Lockheed competed for the contract.

How to start benefiting from investment management with as little as $5,000 per cent or more has been paid the year's high-low range and dividend are shown for the new stock only.

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflatioo, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have torned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year. For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. N-26.

SOFT STATE:

A Newspaperman's Chronicle of By Bernard D. Nossiter. Harper and Row. 1 Reviewed by Richard J. Walto.

THEYRE not going to like this book in New Delhi. Nor are the AID bureaucrats in Washington going to like it much. But Bernard D. Nossiter, a fine economic/political re-porter, has come back from a couple of years in India with a good, tough book that challenges the conventional wisdom about that fascinating, impossible land. He dismisses as not very significant the Indian-Chinese border clashes of the last decade, writing that they weren't of much interest to China but were exploited by New Delhi and Washington for their own purposes. And he dismisses own purposes. And he dismisses a favorite thesis of John Kennedy that China and India are locked in a great Communist-democratic competition. Nossiter argues that neither is likely to be accepted as a model by other Asian states with their own particular problems. He says, too, that the importance of India as a foreign policy influence has been exaggerated and that its only real international concern is its obses with Kashmir, an obsession fully shared by Pakistan. Nossiter freely admits that when he was in Delhi he shared the preoccupation with foreign affairs common to correspondents- and presidents and prime ministers—almost everywhere. including most emphatically Washington. Foreign affairs are more glamorous and, despite their great difficulties, not nearly so intractable as domes-tic affairs in India or the United

But in this short book what sensibly concerns Nossiter most is India itself, a land whose poverty and despair are so deep as to be almost beyond comprehension, perhaps even beyond remedy. He's convinced that Western economic theory simply is invalid for India, that circumstances are so wildly different that such theories are essentially useless. And although his humane instincts and genuine concern for the Indian people are evident on nearly every page, he questions, too, the value of foreign ald. Nos-siter is not talking about the generous shipment of American grain that prevented famine during years of drought. What he is talking about are the well-meaning but increasingly ir-relevant schemes optimistically dreamed up at AID and elsewhere. Not that he's necessarily against such projects; but they simply establish tiny islands of growth in an immense ocean of poverty that remains largely unaffected.

lis reservations on foreign aid are rooted in his conviction—and this is what will anger then in Delhi—that the Indian government is not really trying to solve the nation's problems. Notice that. Not that India hasn't succeeded in solving the problems-who could fault any government for that?--but that it isn't seriously trying. Nossiter feels that foreign aid supports the instinct of the government to avoid the hard, controversial decisions that are essential if India is to have of escaping its destroying povert On the questi aid itself, one d agree with Noss that foreign aid, essential to the But it is almost disagree with his

Floyd Patterson: Jimmy Ellis and Jerry Quarry typify the diverse theories.

"Frazier has a 50-50 chance," said Paterson, the ex-champion. "Frazier reminds me of Rocky Marciano; he can throw a lot of terrific punches and take a lot of punches, but Clay has the fastest feet and hands."

"Clay is really fast," said Ells, stopped by Prazier in five rounds and once Ali's sparring partner. "And he can hit a lot harder than people think." "I like Frazier," said Quarry, stopped on cuts by Ali in three rounds and by Frazier in seven. "I know Frazier punches too hard for Clay. He'd be the aggressor. Clay can't pinch hard enough to keep Frazier away."

Although the confrontation could be eopardized by a United States Supreme Court decision on Ali's draft-refusal conviction, Feb. 17 is the target date, either at the Garden or the Houston

 $100- Understanding "We think we've got a better than 50 percent chance of landing it," said Harry Markson, the Garden boxing director. "Not every city can charge $100 for a ticket."

Since an Ali-Frazier showdown looms as a sure sellout, the Garden promoters are exploring the possibility of closedcircuit TV location in the New York area, thereby minimizing the Astro-dome's argument that a Garden bout would waste the lucrative New York market for closed-circuit TV.

Significantly, the Garden will use Manhattan Center as a closed-circuit.
TV site for the Ali-Bonavena overflow. Four suburban New York locations didn't detract from the Garden drawing a near-capacity crowd of 18,036, producing a $196,026 gate for George Fore-man's second-round knockout of Boone Kirman, followed by a Frazier-Foster telecast from Cobo Arena, where 6,300 produced $130,000. Foster has been ordered by the World Boxing Association to sign for title defense within 90 days. Jimmy Dupree of Jersey City is the No. 1 contender. But Dr. Robert Bennett, who attended ster after his knockout, advised him not to compete for three months.

Will They Forgive?

WASHINGTON.-Will Middle America forgive? We'll know the answer to that question before the 1972 elections. The Saturday Evening Post has just announced it's going back in business, as a quarterly. Beurt Ser Vaas. an Indiana publisher who bought up most of the Curtis Publishing stock. says the new magazine will look like the old Saturday Evening Post m

the days when

Buchwald

Norman Rockwell's covers reigned supreme. "The Post will represent Middle America," said Ser Vaas. "aud will not be sophistleated or blase. It will have the qualities of kindness, sympathy, nos-talgia and optimism that made it a favorite of Americans for many generations."

All well and good, and I wish Mr. Ser Vaas R lot of luck, But. I believe he should be aware he faces B very serious problem. When the Saturday Evening Post was struggling for its life a few years back, it decided to cut two million subscribers from its sin million circulation list. A computer was hired to weed out older people, small-towners and people who didn't have the buying power the Post advertising people thought they should. The niagazine announced publicly it only wanted a young-class reader This was a blow for the people who loved the Saturday Evening Post the most, and when they received a notice from the Curtis Publishing Company telling them they had no class and they were being struck from the subscription list, they couldn't believe it. Some became emblttered, others depressed, and a few committed suicide. Most people who were cut have not gotten over lt. Unfortunately, these are the same readers Mr. Ser Vaas is going for. How can he get those people whom the old SEP had declared non-persons to subscribe again?

Here is a suggested letter he might send out:

"Two and a half years ago, a computer in our company went berserk and cancelled your subscription to the Saturday Evening Post. This computer, which we bare since discovered was an effete intellectual snob, had decided, without conferring with anybody to drop everyone from Middle America and ouly send the magazine to those who lived in the high-rent districts of this

"The computer worked alone at night, when no one was in the building, sorting out people by ages and income brackets. Anyone over forty and who made less than $20,000 a year was crased from its tape.

"In the morning when we came to work, the computer pretended that everything was A-O.K. None of us here at Curtis had any ides of the disloyal components that were working against us. "II was just by accident, when we received two million letters protesting cancellations of our magazine, that we susnected foul play. . . .

"The computer denied any wrongdoing, but we were so certain it was lying that we applied electrodes to its auxiliary condenser. The agony was too much and it fed out a confes-

"You will he happy to know that this computer is no lovger with us. After being stripped of all its tapes and fuses, it was sold to the Soviet Union, where it is now computing saft-mine production in the Urals.

"Knowlog that as a loyal patriotic American you would not hold a traitorous computer against us. we are asking you to re-subscribe to the Saturday Evening Post.

The 18th-century facade of "the second most beautiful châtean" near Bordeaux. the Château Bouscaut.

Americans Buy Bordeaux Vines And a Chateau

PARIS-Yes, there are happy American businessmen, radiant in fact. While their colleagues have Dow-Jones hangovers, they are drinking the wine of life or rather the wine of Château Bouscaut in the Graves area of Bordeaux, which they bought two years ago.
"It sure beats golf," says happy Allan

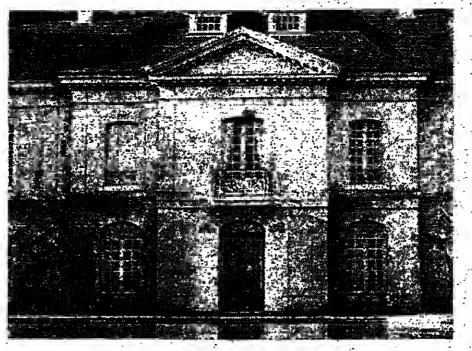

Meltzer, a New Yorker who is one of Bouscaut's three major owners. "Wine is one of nature's works of art. I can't drink whisky any more."

The only trouble with becoming a winegrower is that Mr. Meltzer's restaurant bills have soared. Bouscaut '53, for example, sells for $35 in New York restaurants. "When the Maitre d'smiles and recommends Mr. Meltzer's wine it can get very expensive." says Mr. Meltzer. "And it behooves the proprietor to send bottles of his wine to friends Rt other tables."

Bouscaut came up for sale in the spring of 1968. The major vew shareholders are Charles Wohlstetter, who bought the Raquet Club in Palm Springs when he felt it needed refurbishing, insurance broker Howard Sloan, and Mr. Meltzer, who is easing out of his fleld of financial public relations. Lesser shareholders include three men from Seattle, who make the 6,000-mile trip to Bouscaut each year (Wohlstetter's secretary keeps a special book to co-ordinate the owners' visits1. Thanks to the partners' efforts. Chateau Bouscaut can now be found from the Pavillov and Four Seasons in New York to "the best shops in Bel Air" and, obviously the Raquet Club in Palm Springs.

Do Mr. Meltzer's friends ever ask him to get it for them wholesale?

"Certainly not," said Mr. Meltzer, greatly offeuded. The partners buy their wine at retail prices and business is going very nicely, thank you. "We want it to pay for itself and be good," says Mr. Meltzer. "And meanwhile, we're having

The partners' total investment was about $2 million. The château is marvelous for entertaining clients and is an unbeatable status symbol. "It's unbelievable." says Mr. Meltzer, "If I'd bought a boat for that amount of money-well, a lot of people have But status symbols rarely give pleasure.

Wine-making noes. "You get so proud drinking your wine." Mr. Meltzer says. "I stand in the cellar rolling it about." He has become vary good at phrases like, Is it noble? Does it furnish the mouth? Bouscaut, says Mr. Meltzer, is the second most beautiful house in Bordeaux "the first is Beychevelle, which is stunning". The partners have improved and redecorated it. "We have probably the best plumbing in Western Europe, and closet space you just cau't fill," says Mr. Meltzer. No American food is served.

Along with the château and 150 acres of land, the partners got au admirable wine cellar for their money. They also got a share in Bouscaut's glorious past. "A leading merchant said to me the other day, In 1934 you produced a wice that was bettered by nobody," Mr. Meltzer says proudly.

They are investing in new equipment new vines (there was a touch too much Merlot, they found) and even barrels. "We'll buy new barrels at $30 spiece, use them a year, like the great houses do, and sell them for $15," Mr. Meltzer says. "We want the wine to pay for itself," he adds, "because that means success. After all, Charles Engelhard doesn't need the purse, but he wants to

This year's predictions—quality as good as '59, quantity double last year's-have made the partners positively ecstatic. "Happy days are here again!" seld Mr. Meltzer, "When you produce, as we will this year, 17,000 to 18,000 cases, we're talking of a total volume F.O.B. spproaching half a million dollars." Sometimes it's hard for a businessman not to sound like a businessman.

Mr. Meltzer has been taking French lessons for three months and has been warmly welcomed by the cool Bordelais. We'll be guests at Lafite vext week we've been to Mouton for lunch, we're going to La Mission." He is rather scornful about Burgundy. "I was there in '63 to visit the maker of a world famous wine. The man was living with a dirt floor in his house. Burgundy has a different style of living, it all goes back

Local real estate ageuts, having voticed the ecstasy that the vis de château brings to the Bouscaut boys, have offered them other properties.

"It would not be my purpose to acquire chain of châteaux," Mr. Melizer says a little stiffly. "If I wanted to be in the real estate business, I'd be in Min-
